LOOKING BACK AS WE LOOK FORWARD

As we celebrate the 125th anniversary of the Marquette University School of Dentistry, we naturally revisit and reflect on the school's substantial successes, challenges and milestones. As I think about all those who have come before me, helping to build and transform the Dental School into the institution it is today, I am at once humbled and proud to be in a position of stewardship, helping to carry forward and expand on their visions and values.

Looking at our storied history, which we have chronicled for you beginning on page 2, it's easy to see the ways in which our Dental School has been an asset to the community, the city, the state of Wisconsin and the field of dentistry.

Although the Dental School has expanded and contracted, remodeled, rebuilt and relocated, diversified our student body, revamped our curriculum and advanced our technology, our mission to prepare dentists to provide exceptional care and service to others remains, and will remain, unchanged.

Our school accommodated surging enrollment circa the early 1920s and triumphed over a very real threat of closure in the early 1990s. We built a modern facility to take us into the future and introduced a redesigned curriculum that reaffirmed our leadership in dental education. Throughout this time, our Catholic, Jesuit-inspired commitment to serving others has only grown stronger and expanded to include even more people in need.

I want to thank all of you — our alumni and friends — for your part in sustaining Wisconsin's Dental School and helping us do our best work. Without your support, we might not be standing here today, ready to welcome the next incoming class and prepare them for success and service. Your contributions of time, talent and treasure, as well as the connections you have maintained with our school and our students are invaluable. Together, we can ensure that the Marquette University School of Dentistry is here to teach, lead and serve for the next 125 years and beyond.

Marquette University
SCHOOL OF DENTISTRY

*125th
Anniversary*

The story of the Marquette University School of Dentistry is one of esteemed leaders and educators who have shaped their field, students steeped in clinical training and well prepared for professional success, and a shared commitment, in the Jesuit tradition, to serving others.

The school's longest-serving dean to date was Dr. Henry Banzhaf, a prominent Wisconsin dentist who "headed practically every dental educational and professional group in the country," wrote former faculty member Dr. Peter Jacobsohn in 1994. The Milwaukee Sentinel noted in 1933 that Banzhaf "has received every honor that this profession can bestow," and also had "a sympathetic ear for students who come to him with their problems."

LAUNCHING DENTAL EDUCATION

Dental education in Wisconsin begins Sept. 26, 1894, when the Milwaukee Medical College welcomes its first dental students to classrooms and a 16-chair dental clinic inside Trinity Hospital at Wells & 9th streets. Five years later, the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons, less than two miles away, also begins enrolling dental students. The two programs eventually merge and join Marquette University on Feb. 1, 1913.

After World War I, enrollment begins to surge and the school responds by building new space.

GAINS AND GROWING PAINS

As demand for a Marquette dental education grows, the Dental School expands space, services, programs and class diversity. Facilities receive major investment, with significant expansion and remodeling projects in the mid-'50s and early '70s. Still, there are compromises to keeping the old building shell, and faculty and students struggle on occasion with their environment as they work to uphold the program's high quality.

1956/ For the school's 75th anniversary, a new dental wing is planned.

1958/ The new dental wing opens as a four-story addition to the building on 16th St. More room enables admission of more students and helps the school provide more service to the community. An entire floor is dedicated to pediatric dentistry.

1959/ Marquette receives more applications to its dental school than any other dental school in the country.

1961/ Dental Images launches as a student-produced publication.

1968/ Marquette collaborates with the Wisconsin Dental Society, the state dental health insurance program, and Milwaukee Children's Hospital to establish a new program to train dental students to care for children with special needs. The training is done at Children's Hospital.

EARLY 1970s/ The Dental School's antiquated 1921 facility is gutted for an update. By 1976, five clinics are added or renovated and an independent learning center is built.

1970/ Beards are banned for students and faculty members, under a theory that they carried bacteria that could be passed on to a patient.

1971/ An editorial in the Greater Milwaukee Dental Bulletin urges the Dental School to separate from Marquette and become the Dental School of Wisconsin in order to get more state aid. The President of the Greater Milwaukee Dental Association publicly disagrees with the editorial.

1977/ The school creates a new position, Minority Student Affairs Coordinator, to recruit and advise minority students in a dental career.

REINVENTION AND EXPANSION

By 1991, the Dental School carries a $1.2 million budget deficit and faces possible closure. A task force investigating ways to sustain the school concludes that state aid is essential. Then-Governor Tommy Thompson's Commission on Dental Care declares support for a state-subsidized dental school and insists that it remain at Marquette — rejecting floated proposals to relocate it to UW-Madison or the Medical College of Wisconsin. The Commission also wants the more experienced students to provide care in under-served areas as part of their training. The state support paves the way for the school to build — and later expand — a brand-new facility, debut an innovative new curriculum, grow class size to fortify the professional pipeline and continue to expand service to the community.

2002/ The brand new, state-of-the-art building that Dean William Lobb and other university leadership envisioned and championed opens at 1801 West Wisconsin Ave. The 120,000-square-foot facility offers cutting-edge technology including a central sterilization system and pre-clinical simulation lab, as well as more efficient operatories and a faculty practice clinic.

The building is designed around new operational strategies to make the school profitable and to enable implementation of a new, leading-edge curriculum for students, with a focus on clinical training and providing the best possible patient care.

2012/ The American Dental Education Association recognizes Dean William Lobb with the prestigious William J. Geis Award for Vision, Innovation and Achievement in Dental Education.

2013/ A 40,000-square-foot addition to the Dental School building, aided by an $8 million matching grant from the State of Wisconsin, is completed. The expansion adds a new 24-chair clinic, expands the faculty practice, adds a 4,700-square-foot clinical research laboratory, significantly upgrades and expands the simulation lab and enables admission of 20 more students per incoming class.

2014/ The dental school expands its commitment to research, hiring Dr. Lobat Tayebi as director of research to develop the new lab and facilitate collaboration among Marquette disciplines as well with scientific researchers at other universities, nationally and internationally. The lab is outfitted with state-of-the-art equipment.

2018/ The Dental School receives a pledge for the largest single gift in its history: $5 million from Dr. Paul A. Andrews, D '74, to fund scholarships, with preference to veterans and children of active military or veterans.

DR. DEAN J. COPPOLA D '87

For more than 27 years, Capt. Dean Coppola was a blessing to some of the most vulnerable populations in the world as an officer in the Commissioned Corps of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Dean was an emergency response asset, serving those devastated by emergencies such as hurricanes Ike, Maria, Frances and Irma; the Ebola response; and the 9/11 World Trade Center attacks.

His team cared for those who refused to leave the site of the 9/11 attacks, still searching for missing loved ones. "I will always remember the playing of taps every time there was a recovery, and the remains were solemnly marched off site with a flag draped over them," he recalls.

One of his last deployments was to Liberia treating health care workers with Ebola. "To watch patients pass before your eyes from this horrific disease was so painful. But in spite of all this, I was able to see God," he says.

"The Jesuits opened my Catholic eyes to see a world of service that I had never known before. Marquette has and continues to be a core part of who I am," he says.

Dean has received numerous awards and honors throughout his career, notably the USPHS Dental Responder of the Year and USPHS Commissioned Corp Responder of the Year.

DR. THOMAS E. GELHAUS D '84

Tom has used his skills to help developing nations for more than 25 years through dental mission work.

As a baby, Tom was baptized at Church of the Gesu by the School of Dentistry's chaplain, Rev. William J. McEvoy, S.J. During the service, Father "Mac" announced, "Here's a little Jebbie" — and so it was destiny. Tom became a third-generation graduate of Marquette University, following in the footsteps of his father, uncle and brother.

Working hard, sharing what you have and being humble are values that have been passed from each generation to the next. As founder of the nonprofit Muchas Sonrisas Inc., which translates to "many smiles," he helped establish or assist at clinics in Bolivia, Peru, Honduras and Guatemala. The corporation extends its reach and accessibility by offering portable clinics in areas without dental facilities.

"The children who I treat bring me face to face with Jesus in a special way," he says. "The conditions I encounter in the mission field continuously remind me that we in the United States are 'the rich man,'" and as told in 1 Peter 4:10, "Each of you should use whatever gift you have received to serve others."

Previously an adjunct instructor at Marquette, Tom has been practicing dentistry in Clark County, Wis., since 1985, seeing about 2,000 active patients. His practice provides one "free mission day" a month, treating families for no fee. Tom's wife, Mary, daughter, Nellie, and sons Eddie, Kit and Tim often accompany Tom on his mission trips.

DR. LAURA J. RAMMER, D '07

Laura's dental philosophy is inspired by her Marquette education and the myriad dental professionals who lead by example. "My intent is to provide every patient with the best care in a respectful, thorough, honest and caring manner."

Constantly setting greater goals has led to her measurable personal success. Laura was accepted to the Marquette University School of Dentistry, graduated and in 2010 purchased her dental practice in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

As an elementary school student, Laura knew she wanted to be a dentist. She is thankful for the privilege of helping people with their dental health, an integral part of whole-body wellness.

Laura has found a way to merge her hobby of showing dairy cattle and her profession. When her practice hosted June Dairy Month activities, she brought her prized cow, Deidra, to the office parking lot on a Saturday morning and talked with patients about healthy teeth and calcium-rich foods.

Laura serves on the School of Dentistry Advisory Council and volunteers as a department lead for the Wisconsin Dental Association's Mission of Mercy endeavor. She has held leadership positions with the Sheboygan County Dental Society and the WDA's Membership Committee. She was inducted into the International College of Dentists and Pierre Fauchard Academy. Laura was named Sheboygan County's 2013 Entrepreneur of the Year.

pathways TO DENTISTRY

BY DR. TIMOTHY WARD, D '76

DR. JA EUN LEE

I often marvel at how our lives are intertwined and connected. Our pathway to dentistry, for example, is a result of our interaction with teachers, mentors and role models. It is fairly common to find dental students whose parent, relative or friend of the family was a dentist and had a positive influence on them. My own path was fairly typical although, starting dental school at the age of 24, I was one of the “old men” in the class, having already completed a Master’s Degree.

These thoughts of how we are connected were on my mind when I met up with Dr. Ja Eun Lee, BS '07, D '11. I learned of the path she followed which took her from a rural, impoverished community in South Korea to graduating from Marquette University. She was raised in a tight knit family and especially influenced by her father, whom she described as having passion and dedication. He believed in her ability to succeed at a very young age.

Dr. Lee, who goes by JaJa, knew by age nine that she not only wanted to be a dentist, but that she wanted to be an American dentist because “it is the best dentistry in the world.” The first hurdle was to learn English. At the age of 12, her father took out a loan and sent her to an international boarding school in the Himalayan Mountains of North India. School was taught only in English and Hindi. No one spoke Korean, so she began with classes in English as a second language. Although this was challenging, it initiated Dr. Lee’s appreciation for language acquisition that continues to this day. At first she was terribly homesick, but with perseverance she graduated from high school in India while looking to the United States for college and dental school.

This brought her to Milwaukee and Marquette University. JaJa graduated with a Bachelor of Science and, four years later, a Doctor of Dental Science degree. The perseverance and passion modeled by her father continue in the current generation. Of her two siblings, one is in dental school at the University of Pittsburgh and the other just completed medical school.

Dr. Lee now works at the Mitchell Street Clinic, which serves primarily a Hispanic community. She has a passion for working this population, improving their oral health while they help her sharpen her Spanish. Several years after graduating, she married a classmate, Tom Eldridge, D '11, who was a Navy Dentist at the time. Tom now works in private practice in Milwaukee and they recently had a girl, Lena Lee Eldridge. JaJa only speaks Korean to her while Tom speaks English.

The connections continue on. Dr. Lee became a role model for the daughter of her dental assistant, Lucy Morales. Recently Lucy came across a project that her daughter, Emily, had completed in seventh grade, “My Role Model Dr. Lee.” In it, Emily relates how important Dr. Lee has been in her life as an example of hard work and the importance of education. Emily is looking forward to attending Marquette University starting in the fall, the first in her family to go to college.

I marvel at the connections from Dr. Lee’s father to JaJa and on to Emily. For most of us, the pathway to dentistry was much shorter than Dr. Lee’s travels from South Korea to India to the United States, however, we all share the need for mentors that believe in us and help us find our own path. Dr. Lee left me with high praise for Marquette. “For me”, she said, “this is a true American Dream!”

Rare Teaching Skulls Added to Dental School Museum

Drs. Paul Mahn, D '84, and Peter Jacobsohn, D '62, have donated several vintage museum-quality skulls to the Dental School, which were recently added to the school's dental museum collection. These historically significant skulls were created as teaching demonstration models and represent the highest quality authentic anatomic specimens. Teaching skulls of this quality are rare and are no longer being created. They are currently on display in the new wall unit built to hold the vintage book collection.

DR. HENRY TAKEI Honored by Government of Japan

Dr. Henry H. Takei, D '65, Grad '67, received the Spring 2019 Decoration from the Government of Japan for his many years of contributions to promoting academic exchange between Japan and the United States in the field of periodontics.

Dr. Takei is a Distinguished Clinical Professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, (UCLA) School of Dentistry. He has been on the faculty since 1967.

Besides his role at UCLA, Dr. Takei has lectured extensively throughout the world and, for the past four decades, has presented lectures to thousands of dentists in Japan and influenced the development of CE programs and a cultural exchange program; nearly 400 students and faculty from UCLA and universities in Japan have benefitted from the experience.

Until recently, Dr. Takei maintained his private practice in downtown Los Angeles where many Japanese live and work.
